Youth who “age out” of the foster care system have a rough road ahead of them. That road got a lot smoother for Terrell when it led him to Joseph’s Home.

Terrell spent 11 years in foster care. When he turned 18 he was emancipated (officially released) from the foster care system. He was on his own. But he was also alone.

To make matters worse, Terrell had been diagnosed with type 1 diabetes when he was 14. Without insulin injections, proper eating habits and frequent monitoring of his blood sugar, his health was in serious jeopardy. Terrell needed an income, a stable living situation and access to health care.

He tried to re-connect with his parents, but that plan failed quickly. He couch-surfed with friends and even returned to former foster homes as a short-term guest. He worked several part-time jobs. None of them provided health insurance or paid enough to cover rent. And all the time his diabetes was out of control. His blood sugar levels rose and fell to unsafe levels, causing vomiting and dangerous blackouts. He frequently ended up in the hospital for days or weeks at a time, effectively stuck in a cycle of hospitalization and transience.

The cycle finally ended when he was admitted to Joseph’s Home in May.

The staff of Joseph’s Home connected him with Care Alliance, where he found help enrolling in Medicaid to get much-needed insulin and medical supplies. The staff also worked with him to establish the healthy routines that would be essential for managing his diabetes.

In two months at Joseph’s Home, he wasn’t admitted to a hospital once—a major accomplishment given his history of frequent, prolonged hospitalization.

Terrell moved in early August to his own apartment for the first time in his life. He can’t afford much since his only current income is a part-time seasonal job, but it’s a start. Joseph’s Home paid his first month’s rent and provided bedding and toiletries. Generous donors contributed a bed and dressers. With access to the medical care that he needs to stay healthy and the ongoing support of his new Joseph’s Home family, it’s safe to say this is the first real chance he’s had.

“This has been a wonderful experience for me. A very wonderful and helpful process.”

— TERRELL, SPEAKING OF HIS EXPERIENCE AT JOSEPH’S HOME

Out of Foster Care.
Out of a Home.

Terrell’s story is not unique. Some studies estimate that up to 40 percent of children who age out of foster care will experience homelessness within four years.

The Sisters of Charity Foundation of Cleveland recently hosted a forum in Cleveland about the connection between foster care and youth homelessness. The forum, “Assuring Stable Homes,” focused on how best to prevent homelessness for youth who age out of foster care.

Terrell was one of two former foster children interviewed by the WCPN program The Sound of Ideas for its coverage of this forum. To hear audio of his interview and an archived version of a WCPN on-air panel discussion about the topic, visit ideastream.org and search for “Aging Out of Foster Care.”
Staff Nurse Sister Sandy LoPorto, SSJ-TOSF, celebrated two significant milestones this summer: her jubilee (50-year anniversary of her entrance to the Sisters of St. Joseph of the Third Order of St. Francis) and her 10-year anniversary at Joseph’s Home.

As staff nurse, Sister Sandy is deeply involved in the life and recovery of each Joseph’s Home resident. She administers medications, tracks vital signs, reviews the medical records of potential new residents and advocates for residents with medical providers. She also accompanies residents to major medical procedures or consultations if needed.

Sister Sandy is also responsible for educating and counseling residents about their health issues, which is not an easy job. Because many residents have conditions such as diabetes, hypertension and heart disease, Sister Sandy has to frequently lecture about diet and healthy lifestyle to men who don’t always want to hear what she has to say. But, she has a knack for getting the message across anyway.

“Sister Sandy is tougher than any of us. Guys come in here thinking they’re tough and acting tough. But they go into that nurse’s office with her and 10 minutes later they come out crying like a baby,” said a former resident.

“Sister Sandy is truly a gem,” said Executive Director Georgette Jackson. “She’s a caring, compassionate woman. And she’s an outstanding nurse.”

When residents are preparing to transition out of the Joseph’s Home program, Director of Development Nathan Munn will sometimes ask them about the staff who have helped them. “It’s rare that I ask that question and don’t hear Sister Sandy’s name mentioned. Her work for our residents is a labor of love. They know it. And they love her for it,” said Munn.

The board, staff, alumni and residents of Joseph’s Home extend heartfelt congratulations and gratitude to Sister Sandy LoPorto. You are an inspiration to all of us! 🌟

Mr. Carter ::  When he ended up living in an abandoned house with no heat, electricity or running water in the middle of a cold Cleveland winter, Mr. Carter finally realized he had hit bottom. He called a friend to ask for help with his alcoholism and ended up in detox, followed by a longer-term treatment program.

He was limited in his ability to participate in treatment because he needed a hip replacement, as well as frequent specialist care for an inflammatory lung condition. The treatment program referred him to Joseph’s Home.

During his time at Joseph’s Home, he underwent hip replacement surgery and his breathing improved. He also maintained his recovery by participating in Alcoholics Anonymous and counseling. He moved into permanent housing in May.

Mr. Brown ::

Mr. Brown’s lung disease progressed to the point that his lungs collapsed in January. Doctors told him that he would need to start using oxygen.

He was visiting Cleveland from rural upstate New York at the time and had been laid off the year before. He had much better access to care at the Louis Stokes Cleveland VA Medical Center than where he had been living, so he decided to stay in Cleveland even though he lacked permanent housing.

He went to multiple local homeless shelters for assistance, but found there was no place to store his oxygen. When it became clear the shelters couldn’t accommodate his medical needs, his doctor referred him to Joseph’s Home.

The staff at Joseph’s Home was able to quickly connect him with resources available for veterans and help him find stable housing. He moved into an apartment in September. Now that he has permanent housing, his doctors can consider surgical interventions, such as lung reduction or even a lung transplant.

“I didn’t know a homeless or indigent person could have it as well as it is here.” — Mr. Brown

Mr. Tackett ::

Being hospitalized for depression isn’t anyone’s first choice, but it actually helped Mr. Tackett become more grateful, even as the negatives in his life kept growing.

He and his doctors have struggled to control his type 1 diabetes for a long time, making it impossible for him to stay healthy enough to work for very long. On top of that, his marriage ended, he rarely saw his 12-year-old son and he had several devastating deaths in his family and circle of friends. “I lost everything that had been my life,” he said.

Why was he grateful even when he... was homeless and struggling with his mental and physical health? His time in the psychiatric ward helped him see that there were plenty of people with mental illnesses whose problems were far worse than his.

Mr. Tackett came to Joseph’s Home in January and found that he really benefitted mentally and medically from group therapy, individual counseling and the reduced stress of being in a safe, homelike environment. During his time at Joseph’s Home, he participated in GED preparation classes. Not content to simply pass, he aims to get scores high enough to qualify him as “college and career ready.” He moved into permanent housing in July and would like to go to school to study computers.

“I’m not perfect. I’m still working on myself. But Joseph’s Home gave me a start.”  – Mr. Carter

Mr. Fry :: “The only way I can make this work is to have a positive attitude,” said Mr. Fry as he reflected back on his path to Joseph’s Home. A multitude of health problems, such as cancer, congestive heart failure, diabetes and a bad back, have made it impossible for him to work since 2009. When his wife left him and moved away, his house was foreclosed. He ended up couch surfing and sleeping in his car until he arrived at Joseph’s Home in late 2013.

Initially overwhelmed by despair, he received a much-needed emotional and spiritual boost from his church after he opened up and shared his struggles. Lifted by their prayers and encouragement, he has poured himself into church life and is active in both music and youth ministry. He’s also taking ministry preparation classes in the evenings and plans to study religion and psychology at Cuyahoga Community College.

Mr. Fry completed his radiation therapy in April and moved into permanent housing in May.

Mr. Cambell :: After more than a decade of severe depression and abuse of cocaine and alcohol, Mr. Campbell’s kidneys failed.

Hospitalized and knowing that he would need dialysis for the rest of his life, he finally got serious about sobriety. He went through treatment, started getting regular psychiatric care from the Louis Stokes Cleveland VA Medical Center and entered a transitional housing program.

However, a lung infection and arthritis forced him to change his plans. After time in medical rehab, he came to Joseph’s Home to complete his recovery from the infection, get his arthritis under control, and maintain his sobriety and psychiatric health.

In August, he moved to Columbus to be near his daughters, the youngest of whom is a freshman at The Ohio State University.

“This is a stepping stone in your life.”  – Mr. Fry

Resident Uses Green Thumb to Give Back

Current Joseph’s Home resident Mr. L. is fighting cancer while also planting seeds—literally—for better health for himself and others.

This spring, Mr. L. volunteered to take responsibility for the vegetable garden behind Joseph’s Home. The garden is flourishing under his care, which means Joseph’s Home Cook Alphonso Gibson has plenty of fresh, homegrown produce to incorporate into the meals he prepares.

“Mr. L’s work in the garden has been a wonderful way for him to give back to Joseph’s Home. Plus the abundance of fresh, delicious vegetables has also given us another tool to promote healthy eating habits to our residents,” said Executive Director Georgette Jackson.

In the Next Email Issue of Joseph’s Journey...

To help ensure that each client receives the maximum benefit from interaction with homeless service providers, the Cleveland/Cuyahoga County Continuum of Care is providing conflict resolution training for all staff and interested clients of member agencies. The November issue of Joseph’s Journey will cover the joint staff/resident conflict resolution training session for Joseph’s Home. We’ll also take a sneak peek inside a financial literacy training session provided for Joseph’s Home residents by employees of PNC Bank.

The November issue will be published online only and delivered by email. To make sure you will receive this and future email issues of Joseph’s Journey, visit josephshome.com and click the Join Our Mailing List button in the lower right corner.
2014 Events Highlights

Honor Project Trust Awards $25,000 to Joseph’s Home

The Honor Project Trust recently awarded $25,000 to Joseph’s Home, which will be used to provide food, shelter, nursing care and the social services acutely ill homeless men need to find and succeed in permanent housing.

Joseph’s Home was one of 223 Ohio nonprofits to benefit from the 2014 distribution of Honor Project Trust funds.

The Honor Project Trust was established in 2012 by Judge John J. Russo of the Cuyahoga County Court of Common Pleas to distribute unclaimed funds left over after settlement of all claims resulting from a class action lawsuit (Ohio, et al. v. American International Group, Inc., et al).

NOHIMSS Selects Joseph’s Home as Summer Conference Charity

The Northern Ohio chapter of Healthcare Information and Management Systems Society (NOHIMSS) members gathered in June at the Global Center for Health Innovation in Cleveland for a day of presentations and workshops on the latest trends and innovations in health information management.

After lunch, they heard from Executive Director Georgette Jackson about the healing that takes place at Joseph’s Home. Donations from attendees, along with a matching contribution from the chapter, totaled nearly $1,000.

Thank you NOHIMSS members and leadership for choosing Joseph’s Home to be the charity beneficiary of your summer conference and for your outpouring of generosity.
